

Sharing Research Work to propose talks for a webinar on:
Water sector – A call to IUKWC members to lead a webinar

The India-UK Water Center (IUKWC) is launching a series of webinars by Indian and UK scientists engaged in outstanding research work in the water sector. Deadline for submitting proposals to talk in the webinars is 4 May 2020. The focus of the series will be to showcase the breadth of Indo-UK water research/practice and its impacts as well as outputs and learning from IUKWC activities. The focus of the series will be on Indo-UK water research/practice and its implications and to reflect output and learning from IUKWC activities.

All proposals will be followed by the IUKWC Management Board and the webinar topics will be chosen based on the quality of the abstract and impact realized and/or applicability to another country. However, IUKWC would like to allow members to share high quality and high-value research/practice that cannot be done through Indo-UK collaboration but has been conducted and implemented in the UK or India and that can be applied to the other country.

All the webinars will be open to IUKWC members, as well as the wider public. The IUKWC Secretariat will provide technical support and it is expected that the time commitment to leading a webinar will be no more than one day, at the most, to include pre-webinar testing and the webinar itself.
