

DBT-Instem participates in training for COVID-19 volunteers

New Delhi, Feb 12: Scientists from DBT- Institute for Stem Cell Science & Regenerative Medicine (DBT-inStem) participated in a training session organized by the Bengaluru science gallery for volunteers on how to handle COVID-19-related information. The programme was held on 21 January 2021.

In this session, the scientists interacted with local volunteers in both English and Kannada and spoke to them about the basics of the immune system and other aspects that could help them handle any misinformation regarding homemade remedies and supplements. The volunteers have been going to neighbourhoods all over Bangalore providing relevant information to the public.

The session was conducted in virtual mode and ended with a lively question answer session dealing largely with questions regarding the virus. A list of online- resources about COVID-19 that will help educate the public about this disease was shared.
